Clinical Perspectives in Global Health Course

Global health education is in high demand by trainees across the United States, and Emory University is no exception. Clinical Perspectives in Global Health (CPGH) is a novel and innovative elective course offered to second-year medical students as part of their M2 Foundations Elective. Launched in fall 2017, it introduces global health concepts to medical students during their pre-clinical years, and students achieve core global health competencies through didactic sessions, skills workshops, and relevant clinical experiences.

The Consortium of Universities for Global Health (CUGH) has identified 13 competency domains applicable to 21st century global health practitioners (Jogerst, 2015). The CPGH elective course was designed to provide students with an introduction across these domains with an emphasis on global burden of disease, globalization of health and health care, ethics, and health equity.

Elective directors and guest lecturers lead didactic sessions and workshops. Thus far, CPGH instructors have had faculty appointments and/or professional affiliations at the Emory University School of Medicine, School of Nursing, the Rollins School of Public Health, Emory Center for Ethics, the Emory Global Health Institute, and the CDC. CPGH instructors are encouraged to build connections with students for future collaboration in research and global health-related projects (i.e., during the School of Medicine Discovery phase). Residents in the pediatric and internal medicine global health tracks co-lead the CPGH's global health skills workshops, which provide health care delivery simulations and interactive clinical experiences to complement the didactic sessions.

Refugee & Immigrant

Health Toolkit

2019 Refugee and Immigrant Health

Toolkit for Atlanta-area refugee and immigrant children is now available!

In partnership with the Refugee & Immigrant Health and Wellness Alliance \(RIHWA\), a group of Emory researchers and students, along with Children's Healthcare of Atlanta (CHOA) providers, have created a healthcare provider toolkit to better serve immigrant and refugee children.

In 2018, we conducted a survey of Children's Healthcare of Atlanta (CHOA) health professionals to better understand our preparedness to care for local refugee and immigrant children. Our survey results suggest that most providers perceive gaps in both medical and cultural knowledge as well as resources in caring for these children. Informed by these findings, we created an Immigrant and Refugee Toolkit that builds on the American Academy of Pediatrics Immigrant Child Health toolkit but is tailored to our own local context –populations we care for here in Atlanta as well as our own local community resources. The final toolkit was created with input from local physicians and the refugee community and was made possible by a grant from the Leila Denmark

We sincerely appreciate any donation as your contribution will help EGHI support student and faculty programming!
